Why You Should Consider Living With Friends in Retirement

Mental Health · https://community.womensmoneymatters.org/es/resources/why-you-should-consider-living-with-friends-in-retirement/

Link:

The AARP article discusses the benefits of living with friends in retirement, emphasizing how this arrangement can enhance social connections and improve quality of life. It outlines various advantages, such as shared expenses, reduced loneliness, and the emotional support that comes from living with peers. The article highlights practical considerations for retirees, including compatibility, financial arrangements, and maintaining individual privacy. It encourages retirees to explore communal living options, such as co-housing or shared apartments, as a way to foster community and create a fulfilling retirement lifestyle.