The Investopedia article discusses whether retirees should sell their homes as part of their retirement planning. It outlines various factors to consider, such as financial implications, emotional ties, and lifestyle changes. The article suggests that selling a home can free up equity, reduce maintenance costs, and lower monthly expenses, making it a viable option for some retirees. However, it also highlights reasons to stay in one's home, like emotional attachment and the desire for stability. Ultimately, the decision should be based on individual circumstances, financial goals, and personal preferences regarding retirement living.
