How livable is your community?

Housing · https://community.womensmoneymatters.org/resources/how-livable-is-your-community/

Link:

The AARP Livability Index is a tool designed to help individuals assess how well their communities support aging in place. It evaluates neighborhoods and communities based on various factors, including housing, transportation, environment, health, and engagement. Users can input their location to receive scores across these categories, helping them identify strengths and weaknesses in their area. The index aims to promote informed decision-making for older adults and their families, encouraging community improvements that enhance quality of life for seniors.